Green Clouds, often called "The Five Fairies of Celtic Music", with their fantasy costumes and faces hidden by mysterious masks, offer a show of great scenic effect. They combine the instruments of classical tradition such as oboe and violin with drums, electric bass, keyboards and electronic technologies, producing a new evocative sound, with a strong celtic contamination that is often accompanied by elements of EDM.

Established in the spring of 2007, the group has had an intense live activity both in Italy and abroad.

The band has opened St Patrick's Day at the Guinness Storehouse in Dublin.

They took part in important events such as the Irish Folk Open Air - Poyenberg (Germany), Tierradura Folk Festival (Spain), Montelago Celtic Festival (Italy), Fairylands Celtic Festival (Italy), Busto Folk (Italy), Lucca Comics & Games (Italy) and more.

The band has shared the stage with renowned international artists such as Hevia (Spain), Carlos Núñez (Spain), Red Hot Chilli Pipers (Scotland), Frankie Gavin (Ireland), The High Kings (Ireland), Mercedes Peón (France), Ilana Yahav (Israel). The Chamber of Deputies has given Green Clouds the recognition medal as the first all-female band of Celtic Electronic Music, as part of the Golden Circus Festival. Among their various awards, they have received the prize as Best Contamination Music at the 14th Prize Mia Martini.

Green Clouds performed live on Rai Radio 2 during Earth Day 2016, and some of their songs have been used for various cinema, television and radio productions. One of their songs was included in the Celtic Dreams compilation, produced by Quickstar Production of Baltimore (USA).

Their third and latest album, THE GREEN CLOUDS QUEST, was presented in world première at the fiftieth anniversary edition of Lucca Comics. The album was born from the desire to bring the music of Green Clouds closer to the playful world of Fantasy, videogames, role playing, live action and cosplayers. The five members of the band are identified in the five protagonists of a fantastic adventure that is also narrated through the pages of a comic.

KELTRONIC
